A Taste of Durham

A sense of place is more than just scenery, heritage and culture. The food and drink of an area provides that all important ‘taste of a place’ and creates lasting holiday memories. And so from dale and vale, city and coast, delicious dishes are to be enjoyed at award-winning eateries famed for using local produce.

Local food heroes work hard to produce high quality ingredients, which are served up with a large dollop of pride at local eateries and attractions.

From stotties (bread) to black bullets (sweets) and Bishop’s Best (beer) to a St Cuthbert’s Slice (cake), even the names of our food provide a talking point.

Raby Castle has a magnificent medieval kitchen with handwritten recipes on display. Here, and at Durham Castle, it’s easy to see how and where people of the past prepared, cooked and served food.

After a busy day of sightseeing, teatime treats are on hand with sumptuous afternoon cream teas served in the surroundings of your hotel, in the pretty and award-winning Café Bowes at The Bowes Museum, within the medieval setting of Durham Cathedral or the stunning gardens at Crook Hall.
